The following eloquent passage is extracted from a Discourse, just published, delivered by MR. GARDINER, of Boston, before the Phi Beta Kappa Society:—

"Do you ask, what has America done for science?—Where are the monuments of her skill? Look abroad over her vast continent; consider the magnitude of her growth in this little point of time; her feebleness, her poverty, her destitution of internal resources but fifty years ago, and now her wealth and strength, her commerce, her manufactures, her agricultural products, her cities, her mines, her roads, her canals, her rivers and lakes covered with steamboats, the ocean with her ships, and reflect how much of science is involved in the contrivance and conduct of this vast and complicated machinery, and much of this unexampled exhibition of national prosperity, is the direct consequence of mechanical ingenuity, and the skilful application of physical philosophy to the business of life. Ask what America has done! Why passing by all minor matters, the successful application of steam to locomotion, begun in America, here perfected for the purposes of navigation, extended in England recently to movements upon land, is the single great invention of the age, likely to produce a change as momentous in the relations of human affairs, as the invention of gunpowder, or the mariner's compass. A whole continent traversed by men and merchandise in less time than it took in days of Pericles to communicate between Athens and Sparta, or in the time of Elizabeth to send a courier from London to Edinburgh! It is in effect as if all the wealth, power, and population spread over this immense territory, were drawn into the narrow compass of the Grecian Peloponnessus, or the little Island of England, or the spot called Massachusetts. Whither then are fled the imagined difficulties and dangers of governing a wide-spread republic? Extent of territory ceases to be weakness. Magnitude is no longer unweildly. Distance is scarcely separation. For, in relation to the extent of empire, the true inquiry should be not how many miles, but how many hours is it from place to place;—and, if we would form some adequate idea of the amazing progress of this cementing and consolidating principle, facility of intercourse, take a single fact for illustration. At the commencement of our revolution, Washington moved to the command of the American armies from Philadelphia to the very place where we are now assembled, with all the expedition which the means of the country could afford for himself and his train, and with no unusual cause of delay beyond a few hours of necessary retardation on the road, in briefly declining the proffered civilities of places thro' which he passed, and he reached this point of his destination on the twelfth day from his departure;—the twelfth day! Even his despatches to Congress by single messengers, resting neither day nor night, were five or six days traversing this route;—and the same journey would now have been accomplished by the aid of the American steam boat, moving without intermission, and without fatigue, in less than thirty hours;—and this time, short as it is, seems not unlikely to be reduced one half, when the British application of the locomotive power shall have been extended by rail roads over the whole route. What an union and concentration is this of the scattered energies of a vast republic."

Stewart's Sketches of Society.

The following description of the present condition of NEWSTEAD ABBEY, the ancient seat of the family of Lord Byron, is from "Stewart's Sketches of Society in Great-Britain."

"Byron had been a school-fellow, on an older form, for several years, at Harrow. And his friend, an admirer of his genius and his works, himself a person of taste, and accomplishments, chose Newstead in preference to any other estate open to his purchase, though then in a most neglected and wretched condition. So much so that many of his friends thought him mad. That which had been one of the noblest and most venerable parks in England, had been despoiled of its timber till not a tree remained; its enclosures were all prostrate; scarce an apartment in the Abbey was inhabitable; the farm returned no rent; and the whole property appeared as if just swept by the besom of destruction.—Col. Wildman, however, believed it to be recoverable; and with his resources it was so. And now, at the end of fourteen years of unremitted expenditure, like the Phoenix, it is rising into a more than primeval magnificence and splendour. The estate is covered with young and thriving plantations, around which, more than six miles of high and substantial brick wall has been built. The farms with new dwellings and out-houses, are productive and valuable in their rents. And the Abbey, which the architect, who inspected it after the purchase, declared would have been one wide ruin, with every roof fallen in, at the end of another heavy winter, is restored in every part to more than primitive strength and durability, and equals in its attractions and magnificence, the most splendid residences of the kingdom.

No alteration has been suffered in the walls or original apartments; but the whole has been newly roofed, many parts refitted, and decayed and mouldering materials substituted by that which is solid and sound. And all in such perfect keeping with the primitive architecture, that not only the Byrons of the last three or four hundred years, but the old Monks of the twelfth century themselves, could they rise from their graves, would find Newstead still their old and well known home.

Byron's own description of the Abbey—

> "An old, old monastery once, and now
> Still older mansion of a rich and rare
> Mixed Gothic—"

is throughout, beautifully true & graphic. The situation is low; chosen as, in the same lines the poet sarcastically says, by the monks,

> ——— a hill behind
> To shield their devotion from the wind."

In America it would perhaps, be called tame; but rising ground, tufted with wood, swelling in the distance on every hand, and the beauty of three small lakes, amidst brightly gleaming lawns, by which it is adorned, compensate, in a degree at least, for the want of a greater wildness of outline.

The principal entrance is by a beautifully groined arch in the west front. It opens into a spacious but low vistibule, supported by Gothic arches, once the room in which the poor and the stranger was received by the monks, in dispensing alms. It communicates, on one side, with the grand staircase—a noble piece of architecture in stone, with an exquisitively painted wall, presenting the meeting of Jacob and Rachel at the well, in the midst of the loveliest imagery of a Judean landscape—leading to the banqueting-hall above; and on the other, with one more common, opening from the landing into the western section of the corridor within.

The grand staircase communicates directly on the upper landing with the banqueting-hall. This was originally the refectory of the monks; and is a noble apartment, more than sixty feet in length, thirty feet wide, and as many in height. The old Gothic roof of oak is still retained; three magnificent windows open from it to the west; and a massive orchestra occupies the end of the entrance. Stately foldings lead from it into the corridor, which communicates with breakfast parlour and library on one hand, and the drawing-room on the other. The breakfast parlour is a beautiful room, in wainscotting of oak, in simple squares, the panels being formed of the old dark wood of the original wainscot, while the pannelling is new and light in its color—the contrast presenting a cheerful and pretty effect.

The library is near this, but on the north side. It is a long, quiet, delightful apartment. The corridor does not extend along this side of the pile; and three windows of stained glass, on one hand, look from it upon the ivymantled quadrangle, its dark cloisters and old fountain, within; while two others, with projecting casements, open upon the ruined arch hung with creepers, and upon the smooth green sward marking the former nave of the chapel—the whole shut in by a heavy grove of old trees, in place of its former walls, from whose tops the cawing of rooks and ravens is constantly falling on the ear, mingled with the soothing murmurs of an adjoining jet d'eau.

The collection of books is not so extensive as in many libraries we have visited, but is select and valuable, comprising many of the choicest works of genius and art, more than sufficient for all the uses of the mind. It is ornamented with portraits and busts, and many articles of interest and curiosity. Over the mantle, hangs the portrait of an ancient Byron, in the costume of the age, known in the old writings of the family and estate, by the designation of "Sir John the Little, with the great beard"—an appendage to his physiognomy fully displayed by the artist. One article, comprised in the furniture of this apartment, will soon lose its interest the table on which the poet wrote CHILDE HAROLD.

The corridor leading from the eastern end of this room, to the entrance of the drawing-room, on the south front, opposite, cannot be less than a hundred and fifty feet in length. It opens by a door of painted glass on the north, to the area of the old chapel, and through it to the old gardens; and on the south, by a large window, near the entrance of the drawing-room, overlooks a lovely landscape, in lawn, grove, and water.

The drawing-room is one of the most magnificient in its dimensions and coup d'œil, we have yet seen in the kingdom. It is eighty feet in length, thirty-five or forty in width, and of a proportionate height. In the days of the monastery, it was the dormitory of the fathers. It is lighted by five immence windows—that in the centre, opposite the fire-place, forming in itself a comfortable boudoir. The floor is of polished oak; and the ceiling, a flattened Gothic arch, supported by brackets and corbels—is a beautiful specimen of Italian art two hundred years ago, in compartment of stucco, exhibiting a great variety of figures and devices, flowers, birds, &c. &c.—The walls are hung with full length portraits of several of the kings and queens of England, and of the ancestors of the family; and at the head of the room, is a splendid full length picture of the Duke of Sussex, in coronation dress, with one of Col. Wildman, one side, and another of Mrs. Wildman opposite.

The entire furniture is in admirable keeping with the pile, comprising a large collection of articles of great beauty and antique value. Richly wrought chairs, and sofas of old oak, with cushions of tapestry, cabinets, centre and sofa tables, mirrors, &c. to correspond, relieved here and there, by an article of modern elegance and luxury, a grand piano harp, &c.

And now, having given you this outline of the Abbey, and the principal apartments on the west, northern, and south fronts, I must give you a peep at those openings from the corrider, on the east. These constitute a range of principal bed and dressing-rooms—not less than six of each, all spacious and lofty, and noted by some distinguishing honor or circumstance."

FROM THE PHILADELPHIA GAZETTE.

THE FORLORN HOPE.

Whe notice in a late Providence paper the proceedings of a meeting of the "FORLORN HOPE SOCIETY OR BACHELORS," convened for the purpore of electing a presiding officer in the place of one who recently violated all order and regulation by perpetrating matrimony. The deliberations of those present were distinguished by much solemnity. The choice eventually fell upon J. N. Esq. in whose behalf, as a recommendation, it was alleged that he had been positively and peremptorily rejected by five different ladies. He was immediately inducted into office, and the account states that "the diadem, composed of half a newspaper, was placed upon his head, the wand of office, a half a pair of tongs with an old glove upon the end, was put into his hand, and the Society paid their respects. As the President is, ex officio, Grand Master of the Most Noble Order of Celibacy, the Vice-President, assisted by the Secretary, proceeded to instal him. The accolade, or blow across the shoulders, was administered with half a pair of bellows; the collar of the order, a lady's old slipper, was hung up about the neck, by half a pair of stay-lacinge: an old garter was clasped around his left leg, and an old spur buckled upon his right heel.

A society denominated the Hope—not Forlorn Hope, however—of an exactly opposite character, is now in existence in this city. It is composed of both ladies and gentlemen, and its primary object is to promote matrimonial unions. The members are liable to trial and punishment for exhibiting indifference in regard to the bonds of hymen, and frequent meetings are held with the view of ascertaining the degree of success that attends their operations. We are not aware of the course pursued in relation to those unfortunate male members who meet with rebuffs from the fair, but we presume that they are entitled to and receive a vast deal of sympathy and commiseration from their associates, blended with encouraging words of "hope" and consolation.

The influence of this society, it is probable, has prevented the organization in this city, of a Bachelor's Club, to effect which some efforts were made not long since. Alas for the departed glory of single-blessedness in Philadelphia! Our bachelors no longer dare assemble in the pride and pomp which distinguished their proceedings years ago. Bachelor's balls and dinners, and excursions,—to which all classes applied for admission, with so much eagerness—are now remembered only as the romance of a past century, as the glory of a previous generation. The few unhappy single wights that still exist among us, are "unhonour'd and unsung," and either crawl to their garrets to tell over their sorrows in silence, or move through our streets, standing mementos of the unfitness of man for self-government. Alas, for the Bachelors of Philadelphia—their miseries are terrible—their sufferings intolerable.

After the death of William the fourth, the Duke of Cumberland will be king of Hanover, and thus will the crowns of England and Hanover be separated.—The Duke of Cumberland's only son is so feeble in health, that it is believed he cannot live long. After him comes the Duke of Sussex, whose sons by Lady A. Murray, although debarred from the [illegible] throne, are entitled [illegible] Hanover.

Hurricane at Dominica.—The Editor of the Alexandria Gazette has received Barbadoes papers to the 5th instant, containing an account of a most dreadful and destructive hurricane, which occurred on the night of the 20th September, on the island of Dominica.

The works on two-thirds of the principal Sugar Estates were levelled to the ground, the canes blown flat to the earth, and in many instances buried in the mud and blown from the soil; every description of provisions above ground completely swept away, and the face of the country, which exhibited before the utmost luxuriance of vegetation, changed to the appearance of a general conflagration having passed over it. There are not 50,000 feet of lumber in the Island, nor 100,000 shingles. Every vessel that was in the roads at the time shared the same fate, viz the sloops Dolphin and Antelope, and a sloop from Monserrant.—An American schooner was driven on shore, bottom up on the south end of the Island opposite to Martinique. The offices, Barracks and Hospital at Morne Bruce, are mostly blown down, and those standing in such a dilapidated state as to make them unsafe to occupy. Every building in the garrison has either been [illegible] to ruins or has suffered considerably—the spacious Hospital, lately built on an improved plan, has been partly unroofed, and the Barrack Master's and Adjutant's offices have been entirely destroyed, and it was with great difficulty that the troops escaped without loss of life.—The left side of the Government House was blown down, and the other parts of the building partially damaged.—The office of the Auxiliary Commissioners of Compensation, adjoining those premises, has been materially injured, and a great many of their original documents destroyed. The new Commissariat building—the Custom-House, the Court-House—Market-House—the Jail and the Protestant Church, and almost every other building in town, have suffered considerable injury from the effects of the Hurricane.—The Mercantile Houses of Messrs. Thomas Laing & Co. Messrs James Garraway & Co. and Thomas W. Doyle, Esq. on account of their proximity to the sea, have also experienced most heavy losses.

Throughout the whole island, and on every estate, the most dreadful destruction took place, the full account of which would fill a column.

The northern part of Martinique has suffered severely, and many vessels have been lost. St. Pierre did not escape, and considerable loss has been sustained at Fort Royal.

Great fears were entertained that the people of Dominica would suffer for want of food, and measures were taken at Barbadoes and elsewhere to send supplies to the suffering inhabitants.

All accounts go to show that this has been one of the most destructive hurricanes ever experienced in the West Indies.

A police Justice of Albany says; "Shall Europe be permitted to cast upon our shores the contents of her prisons and her poor houses?" The remark is called forth by the number of vagrants brought before him, many of whom state that their passages were paid by the parish to get rid of them. One who had just been brought up before him says, stated, "that in June last, the parish officers paid the passages of himself and about forty others of the same parish, from Chatham to the city of Boston in America, on board the ship Royalist, Capt. Parker, and that they landed at Boston in the month of July last. That the parish officers gave him thirty shillings sterling, in money, in addition to paying his passage. That he is now entirely destitute of the means of living, and is unable to labor, and prays for relief."—N. Y. Star.

A French paper states that notwithstanding the desolation brought on so many families in Paris by the recent events on the Stock Exchange, the passion of gambling in the public funds has increased. The Exchange is more frequented than ever. Upwards of a hundred females join daily in the ruinous occupation and the police having driven them from the galleries, they petitioned the ministers for re-admission. A celebrated actress was in the habit of frequenting the galleries, and was known to have suffered heavy losses. One lady accompanied her husband.—What a revolting chapter this is, in the description of life in Paris.

Napoleon, the Military Chieftain, who made himself Emperor in France as hereditary in his established the [illegible] order of nobility, family, [illegible] of glory and ambition and who [illegible] thousands if not millions of lives, was, notwithstanding, so popular, that an individual said he believed if he ordered all the houses in France to be burned, and each man to set fire to his own house, he would be obeyed.

We are indebted to the Providence Journal, for the following daily proceedings of the Assembly ;

Five petitions for sale of [illegible] were received and referred. [illegible] state,

In the afternoon, the House was entirely occupied in receiving, and disposing of private petitions.

Wednesday morning.—A minute report was received from the General-Treasurer, containing the semi-annual statement of the financial situation of the State Treasury. It gives a particular statement of the monies received, from what source, and from whom ; and of the expenditures, to what purpose, and to whom.

Mr. Tillinghast introduced a bill, providing for the annual inspection and sealing of Hay scales.

On motion of Mr. Cranston, Mr. Dorr was appointed to report resolutions for the appointment of a day of Thanksgiving.

The House were in session only about one hour, when they adjourned to give the committees an opportunity to examine the various subjects committed to them.

Afternoon.—An act passed, reviving and amending the charter of the Ocean House Company, in Newport.

The petition of the Providence and Norwich city turnpike company, was continued to next session, with an order of notice.

An act of incorporation was granted to the North Providence Bank, with a capital of $50,000—and to the Wakefield Bank, in South-Kingstown, with a capital of $50,000.

The petition of Oliver Spink and others for a new bank at Wickford, was postponed to next session, by a vote of 31 to 20. The petition was warmly advocated, and as earnestly opposed. The impropriety of granting another bank in that village, where two are now in operation, seemed to be the turning point on the question.

The house voted to proceed to-morrow morning in the trial of the docket of private petitions, and then adjourned.

Thursday morning.—The petitions of David S. Holloway, Oliver Wickes, and Ann T. Townsend, for sale of real estate, were granted.

Mr. Spencer, of Warwick, introduced a bill entitled "An act concerning Masonic Societies," which was read a first time and laid on the table. [This bill requires Masonic Societies, whether incorporated or not, to make an annual return to the General Assembly in May, of the names of their members, and those who are initiated into the Society in the course of the subsequent year, with a copy of the oath, obligation or promise by them taken on their becoming members of the Society.]

The remainder of the forenoon was occupied on the docket of private petitions.

Afternoon.—The Committee on the subject of building a State Prison, made a report, which was read and laid on the table.

The docket of private petitions was further acted on.

The petition of the Third Baptist Society in Providence, for an amendment of their Charter, so that the Corporation shall have the power of taxing the Pews in their Meeting House, to raise funds to make necessary repairs on the house, or additions thereon—to pay all state and town taxes—to pay insurance, and to support religious worship, was taken up. Mr. D'Wolf objected to the granting of the amendment, on the ground that it would be a violation of the act securing and declaratory of certain rights. An animated debate ensued, which was continued until the house adjourned.

Yesterday forenoon, the House was occupied on private bills, &c.

The Assembly it is expected, will adjourn this evening.

The Court of Common Pleas for this county, will commence its Nov. term in this town on Tuesday next.

The Convention for forming a Constitution for the State, will meet at Providence on Monday week, the 10th inst. being the day to which it was adjourned.

Members of Congress from distant States are beginning to arrive, although the session does not commence till the first day of December. Mr. Mangum, the Senator from North Carolina, is already at his post. Mr. Whittlesey, of Ohio, is also in Washington.

Mr. Grundy, Chairman, and another member of the Committee of the Senate for examining into the condition of the Post Office Department, have been overhauling the affairs of the Lowell Post Office.

NEW ENGLAND THANKSGIVING.—The Executive of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, and Connecticut, have concurred with that of Massachusetts, in the appointment of the 27th November as the day of religious thanksgiving the present year.

STATE ELECTIONS.

PENNSYLVANIA.—The returns of the election are all complete, and give for Congress 17 Administration, and 11 Whig members. The strength of parties in the Legislature is as follows : Senate, 25 Admin. 8 Whigs ; in the House, 61 Admin. 39 Whigs and Antimasons.

NEW-JERSEY.—The Legislature of this State is now in session ; the parties stand as follows :—Assembly 29 Jackson, 21 Whigs ; Council, 8 Jackson, 6 Whigs ; Jackson majority in joint ballot, 10.—A Senator is to be chosen at the present session, in the place of Mr. Frelinghausen.

GEORGIA.—The Union party have succeeded in electing their whole ticket for members of Congress, by more than 3000 majority, and also a large majority in both branches of the Legislature.

SOUTH-CAROLINA.—The late election for members of Congress, and State Legislature, appears to have been more favorable to the Union cause than last year. Col. J. Manning, (Union) is re-elected to Congress by a maj. of 625, in opposition to Col. Rees ; and Gen. J. Rogers, (Union) in place of Col. Clowney, the present member, by a maj. of 175 ; Mr. Davis, (Nulli.) was elected by only 70 majority over Major Perry, the Union candidate.

OHIO.—The returns for Governor from 65 counties, give for Lucas, (Jackson) 62,777 ; for Findley, (Whig) 59,684 ; maj. for Lucas 3093 ; nine counties remain to be heard from, which are expected to increase his majority. It is expected that the members of Congress will stand 10 Whigs, and 9 Jackson. The following persons are certainly elected viz.—Whigs, B. Storer, T. Corwin, W. K. Bond, E. Howell, J. Sloane, E. Whittlesey, S. F. Vinton, S. Mason, 8,—Jackson, Wm. Kennon, J. Thompson, D. Kilgore, J. Chaney, T. Webster, T. L. Hamer, Wm. Paterson, B. Jones, and J. M'Lane, 9. Two districts now represented by J. H. Crane, and D. Spangler, (Whigs) are claimed by both parties, but from the appearance of the returns, it is probable the old members have both been re-elected. The Legislature will have a Whig majority in both branches.

LATEST FROM THE SOUTH.

The steam-packet David Brown, Capt. Coffee, arrived last evening, bringing Charleston papers to the afternoon of Saturday, and intelligence from New-Orleans and Mobile to the 16th inst.

Francis W. Pickens, Esq. has been elected to supply the vacancy in Congress, occasioned by the resignation of the Hon. George M'Duffie of South Carolina.

The election in South Carolina has resulted in favor of the States Right Party. In the House 80 to 29, and in the Senate 14 to 5.

At Savannah, on the night of the 20th instant, the first frost of the season occurred. The cholera, which has been desolating the river plantations, subsided so long since, that all fears of its re-appearance are passing away. At Fayetteville, on the same day, there had been a hard frost, and ice was formed for the first time this season.

TRADERS TO THE FAR WEST.—A small company of traders arrived about 10th ult. at St. Louis from Santa Fee. They left early in August, taking Toas in the route, & thus extending the journey across the Rocky Mountains to the trading posts on the Arkansas river.—They met with very few Indians, and suffered no interruption in their progress home. The regular Fall company was to leave Santa Fe in four weeks after.—Trade was very limited in consequence of the scarcity of money and the depredations of the Apachee and other Indians, who intercepted the transmission of goods and specie from the lower part of the country. Large numbers of mules, horses and sheep, forming principal articles of trade among the inhabitants of those provinces—were also constantly stolen by the Indians ; and some of the American Traders had suffered considerable losses in this way. A part only, of the adventurers of last spring had been able to effect sales of their goods: the others would be compelled to remain, or send them to Chihuahua and other markets below. Among the number who have returned is Capt. R. B. Lee, U. S. Army. The present company brought with them eleven waggons, which, with the contents, belong to Messrs. St. Vrain, Bent & Co., of St Louis.

FRUIT.—The Worcester Spy says, that all kinds of fruit is scarce in that vicinity, and that apples sell from 75 cents to $1 per bushel, and peaches for $1 per peck.

THE SHIP ENDEAVOUR.—We observe a correspondent of the Providence Journal, who signs himself a "Newport Visitor," has published an account of this ship ; it is in some respects incorrect.—The following we believe, are the principal facts connected with her arrival at this port.

In the year 1793, a French whaling vessel, called the Liberty, put into Newport, in consequence of the war between England and France. This ship was said to have been the old ship Endeavour, in which the celebrated Capt. James Cook had circumnavigated the globe, and no doubts appear to have been entertained at the time, of the fact, as the name was found stamped on several parts of the ship. After laying at Stevens's wharf for one or two years, she was removed to the lower part of the town, and in going into the dock, was run on a sunken rock and bilged ; after remaining in that situation for several years, she was condemned as unseaworthy, and sold at auction ; she was purchased by Capt. John Cahoone, now of the Revenue Cutter, and broke up at Clarke's wharf, and used for fire-wood. Several of her timbers were preserved by Capt. Cahoone until within two or three years since,—it having become an object of great curiosity, the whole has been taken away in small pieces, as relics, by visitors from every part of the U. States.

We have been promised by an antiquarian friend, a more particular statement of the history of this ship.

THE LOST FOUND.—A man named James Perkins, who was formerly Postmaster at Newington, N. H. was arrested in this neighbourhood on Friday week, under the following circumstances :—It appeared that Perkins, who was a man of some property and respectable standing at Newington, had mortgaged his farm, and procured loans from several of his neighbors to the amount of about $4000, under the pretence of wanting the money to purchase cattle ; that he had started from home with a drove of cattle and sheep, which he sold at Brighton on Monday, the 13th ult. and on Wednesday evening he left Boston for Cambridge-port. Previous to starting, he told his son & another man in his employ, not to be uneasy, should he be absent until after 10 o'clock. His hat & pocket book were found the same evening on Cambridge bridge, the latter rifled of its contents, excepting some papers.—His mysterious disappearance occasioned serious apprehensions in Boston, that he had been robbed and murdered. His creditors in New-Hampshire, however, on learning the facts, attributed his disappearance to the right cause, and immediately started in pursuit ; they succeeded in tracing him to this Island, and having procured the assistance of Sheriff Hassard, the object of their pursuit was discovered and arrested at Middletown, where he had been boarding at a farm-house about a week. He was brought to this town, and after considerable negociation, he gave up $4000, principally in U. S. bank bills, which he had concealed in his clothes. He then agreed to return, and in company with his pursuers, left town the same day for New-Hampshire.

Perkins has a wife and family at Newington. It was ascertained from an intercepted letter, that he had been induced to take this rash step, by an unfortunate connection with an abandoned female, and that he was waiting her arrival here, they intending to go to Block-Island.

The following resolution was passed at the late meeting of the Conference of Congregational Churches of Rhode-Island :—

"Whereas, the American S. S. Union, in connexion with the Rhode-Island S. S. Union, have recently established in Providence a Depository of books, containing all the publications of the American S. S. Union, together with such other suitable books for Sunday School Libraries as have been approved by said Union ; and which are sold at the same low prices at which they can be purchased at their Depositories in Philadelphia and N. York.

Therefore, Resolved, That it be recommended to the Churches and Sunday Schools connected with this Conference, to supply their Libraries from the said Depository, as far as their convenience will permit, and thus to second the liberality and zeal of these Unions in carrying forward the great cause of Sunday Schools.

NEW-YORK ELECTION.

This important election commences on Monday next, and will continue the two following days. In our next paper we shall be enabled to give the result in the City, and some of the counties on the North river.

STEAMBOAT DISASTERS.—The fine steamboat Novelty which has been laid by at Albany during the past season, started from that place for New York, (where she was to take up winter quarters,) in tow of the Oliver Ellsworth, with a cargo of Nott's stoves, on Friday, and struck a hammock on the Overslaugh, amidship, and broke her keel. At high water on Saturday she had four feet of water in her cabin.

The steamer Return, snagged also and sunk at Stack Island ; was from St. Louis, bound to New Orleans, with a full cargo. The boat will be a total loss and most of the cargo will also be lost.

STAMPS.—The English newspapers infer from some remarks in a speech of Lord Brougham lately delivered in Scotland, that the duty on newspapers is soon to be repealed, or essentially modified. The Whig Ministry of England have probably found that their power is best sustained by the general diffusion of knowledge among the people, and so by interest as well as duty are prompted to do away with the heavy tax which debars a great proportion of the people from reading newspapers.

LATE FROM JAMAICA.—To our correspondent of the Norfolk Beacon we are indebted for a slip, containing advices received at that port by the arrival of the British brig Victor, from Jamaica, to the 24th of September.

The accounts of the condition of the island in relation to results of the late act of parliament to abolish slavery, are any thing but as favorable. The Cornwall Courier that has been received contains several accounts of burnings of buildings and improvements by the negroes ; and other incidents that speak plainly the general condition of affairs in the Colonies.

The following is an extract of a letter to a commercial house in Norfolk, which corroborates the statements given in the Courier :

MONTEGO BAY, Sept. 12.

"I cannot give you a very favorable report of the Apprentices. I am opinion that the cultivation of the Cane must decrease, and if our stipendiary magistrates here persist in their partiality to the Apprentices, Sugar making must cease, for they are not doing at present one fourth of their former labour, and no examples made of them."

The negro banditti which some months since became formidable in Virginia, has not been entirely dispersed. Some caves are occupied by the insurgents in the neighborhood of Petersburg, and efforts are making to dislodge them.

POST OFFICE ROBBERY.—A young man named Bailey Patterson, was arrested in this city on Friday last, by Messrs. Jacob and Benjamin Hays, under the following charge : Patterson, it appears, was lately deputy post master in the town of Staunton, Virginia, and a letter reached that office for some person, with a draft on a bank in this city, for $500. This letter was opened by Patterson, who took out the draft and wrote in the name of the person to whom the draft was payable, to a lottery dealer in this city, whom he requested to get the draft paid at the bank, and remit him the amount, to the Post Office at Staunton. In his letter to the lottery dealer, he told him that he might keep the price of ten lottery tickets out of the draft, and send them to him along with the money. As the matter appeared rather suspicious to the lottery dealer, instead of getting the draft cashed, he remitted it to the head Post Master at Staunton, and requested him to make inquires about it. When the Post Master at Staunton received the letter, he immediately showed it to his deputy, Patterson ; of his integrity he had up to that period no doubt whatever. On finding that the matter had taken so unexpected a turn, and fearing a discovery, Patterson left Staunton and came to this city with the intention of going to Europe. Shortly after he left Staunton, the Post Master of that place found out how he had acted relative to the draft, and wrote on to Jacob Hays, who soon ferretted him out, and accompanied by his son Benjamin, arrested him on Friday at the Post Office whilst he was in the act of receiving a letter.

MASSACRE.—A letter from Batavia (East Indies) dated April 23rd, announces the death of Captain Philip F. Livingston, formerly an officer in the U. S. Navy, by the hand of violence, tog[illegible]er with six other persons on boa[illegible] his ship, the Matilda of Batavia, [illegible] bound from that port to some oth[illegible] place in the East, with a [illegible]rgo of salt, and $250,000 in specie belonging to the Dutch government. The murderers succeeded in their object, which was to get possession of the money and having scuttled the vessel, which soon after sunk, they landed on a neighboring shore.

LATE FOREIGN NEWS

Liverpool papers to the 24th of Sept. and London to the 23d, have been received at New-York. All was quiet in England and France.

Don Pedro was in a very precarious state, his medical attendants having issued bulletins stating that there was not the slightest chance of his recovery.

Touching the affairs of Spain a London paper of the 22d has the following remarks,—

"We have received the Paris Journals of Friday and Saturday 20th, and those of the South of France to the 17th inst. inclusive. The Carlists, however defeated, seem to have redoubled their efforts, their audacity, and courage. Whilst Zumalacarreguy is fighting, not without some success, upon the Ebro, insurgent bands are attacking Elisondo, near the French frontier. Bilboa, too, is threatened ; whilst a body, considerable enough to resist the chief army of the Royalists, offer battle in central Biscay. This is little satisfactory : whilst amidst the multiplicity of engagements and accounts, inevitable confusion arises."

The following news, is from the Bayonne Sentinelle of the 16th :—

"We have just received positive information that a serious action has taken place between Mondragon and Ochandiano. Generals Rodil, Cordova, and Angelo, and El Pastor were in the field from the commencement of the action, and commanded the Queen's troops.—The conflict was terrible : the Carlists left 600 men dead on the field. Several mules with their burdens fell into the hands of the Queen's forces. Generals Rodil and El Pastor put to flight the 4th and 6th battalions of the insurgents of the Bastan, Navarre, Guibelalde and Gupascoa.—Zumalacarreguy had called upon the town of Eighalar to furnish him with 2000 rations of bread, wine and meat, which he was to go for yesterday. The authorities of Guipascoa have complained to the government that Gen. Rodil exercised unreasonable vexations, producing no benefit to the cause. The General in return has exiled the authors of this remonstrance. In the small town of Ariscun, twelve houses and the convent were marked to be burnt."

"Other letters from Bayonne mention that the Insurgents were completely beaten on the 12th inst. between Aspeitia and Azcoytia, leaving 700 men in the field in killed or wounded. The similarity of the number would lead one to conclude that both reports concern the same action.—A telegraphic despatch in the Journal de Paris informs us that Rodil entered Vitteria on the 14th, and that two Carlist battalions had attacked Elisondo in vain.

From Sweden we learn that Captain Laideberg, who has been pardoned by the King, after having been convicted of treason against the State, persists in repudiating the favour intended him, and declares his resolution of dying by the hands of executioner.

By advices from Napoli we learn that an insurrection had broken out in Arcadia and that it had extensive ramifications in Continental Greece.

STORM IN MISSISSIPPI.—A very severe storm occurred in Mississippi during the early part of this month. It rained almost incessantly for six days. The Grand Gulf Advertiser of the 6th instant states that more rain fell than was ever known to fall before in that section of the country, in the same space of time—for three days and three nights the very portals of Heaven appeared unloosed, and torrents descended in copious quantities. The Advertiser adds :

From the best information which we have been able to procure, we ascertai that the storm which prevailed here, has been general throughout our state, as fa as heard from, and that great and irreparable injury has been done to the s as well as to the cotton. By some of t most intelligent planters, it is estimat that the cotton crop in this state has bee cut short fully one-half, and by others one-third. The former opinion, we a disposed to believe the nearest the fac judging from the devastation which h been produced in some plantations whi we have examined near our town. any rate, the loss to our planters is gre and discouraging in the extreme. But few short weeks back, the flourishi condition of the cotton fields promised t most bright and delightful prospects to th industrious planters—and was just on th eve of a consummation of their hap anticipations—and now, alas ! they as it were "nipped in the very bud," a their fondest hopes dissipated and scatt ed to the devouring elements. None c regret more sincerely than we do, s untoward and discouraging results— as the story of Jacob faithful says "What's done can't be helped, and its use crying—better luck, perhaps, time."

The Milledgeville (Geo.) Times st that "at the Term of Murray Super Court, a Cherokee Indian by the na of John Graves was indicted and conv ed of the murder of a white man by name of Bates. He was sentenced t hang on the 21st November next.

A plea to the jurisdiction was file this case and overruled ; application since been made to the Supreme C of the United States for a writ of err behalf of the prisoner. The cita which accompanies it as a matt course, will be here probably in the c of ten or fifteen days, and served a former one was, in the case of Ta upon the Governor, citing the Sta Georgia to appear before the bar o tribunal."

RNING OF THE HERMITAGE.—The

ille Republican of the 14th inst.

sterday evening, about 4 o'clock, the f the Hermitage was discovered to fire, and all attempts to arrest the ss of the flames proving unavailing tire edifice, with the exception of oom attached to the northern end, sed as a dining room, was in a few consumed. The valuable furniture lower story was fortunately saved, h much broken and otherwise inin getting it out. That in the second was, we understand, chiefly destroy. The fire is supposed to have been municated to the roof by the falling rk from one of the chimneys; and being at the time a light breeze the north-west, the progress of the s was proportionably rapid. The rous and valuable private papers of President were probably all preserved.

FROM SPAIN.

r. Wier, government messenger, who ed in the Henry IV from Havre, at .York, is the bearer of a treaty signed the Queen of Spain, acknowledging agreeing to pay the claims of our zens on that country. He has also ous documents of importance, relatto our claims on France, but nothing ch changes the aspect of that business.

DON PEDRO.—The Barque Leoni, Capt. Manson, arrived yesterday ning from Lisbon, which port she left the 19th Sept. Capt. Manson states t every thing was quiet at Lisbon; t Don Pedro was in the last stage of dropsy, and that his death was daily pected. Bos. Gaz.

EMANCIPATION IN THE WEST INDIES. pers from Barbadoes received at Alexdria, D. C. state that the islands genelly continued quiet, but the laborers re very lazy, and not inclined to work hen they could avoid it.

A letter from the same place says:—The great measure of emancipation is orking better than the warmest friends that law could have anticipated; and om the neighboring islands we continue receive favorable accounts of the conct of the laborers, with the exception f the colony of Demarara, where a great eal of indolence and apathy have prevailed.

FROM MALAGA.—Capt. Ellis at New-York from Malaga, whence he sailed on the 16th ult. informs, that just previous to his sailing, five hundred regular troops left that place for the neighboring mountains, to exterminate the insurgents who had hoisted the Don Carlos banner, under which they were committing every species of robbery and plunder, thereby intercepting or preventing all traveling on the public highways.

RIOTS IN CHARLESTON.—We have seen a letter from a gentleman of Charleston, stating that on Monday night a serious riot occurred in that city. A large number of the Nullifiers marched in a body to a Union House, near the Rail Road, where a number of Union men were assembled. The House was defended by Union men, who fired at the assailing crowd. Each party accused the other of firing first. Shots were fired on both sides, and six of the Nullifiers were wounded. The Nullifiers immediately turned and rushed to the arsenal, the crowd augmenting as it went along, and demanded arms to revenge themselves. Governor Hayne and General Hamilton here addressed them, and persuaded them to refrain. Savannah Geor.

SUGAR REFINING IN ENGLAND.—The London Mercantile Journal says, "A fresh instance in the decline of the Refined Sugar Trade has occurred since our last; men are being discharged from another house, and the machinery is about to be removed to America; this is a melancholy proof of the apathy in the trade, in not putting their case before the government, aided as the measure would be, by the people, particularly by the inhabitants of the eastern part of the metropolis, who feel the loss of this manufacture materially." The decline in this branch of British industry, is ascribed to the Colonial policy, which, while it requires the colonies to buy all they consume of the mother country, attempts to compensate them by heavy duties at home on all such articles from other countries as are produced in the Colonies, thus compelling the mother country to buy Colonial produce only of her own Colonies, and denying to both the privileges of buying where they can buy cheapest, and selling where they can sell dearest: a policy which in the end ruins both parties.

EARLY FROST.

We had very early yesterday morning a sudden change of temperature—the thermometer fell in an exposed situation thirty degress, and we were unexpectedly visited by some of those chilling blasts which are the heralds of Winter. Fires in our houses were yesterday generally resorted to for comfort. We were visited last night by a severe Frost and Ice in the city, and we fear that in the country it has done great injury to the crops.—Persons who are desirous of resorting to the city on business need not now be under any fears on account of health, as this severe visitation of cold must kill the last lingering remains of Fever among us.

Charleston Pat. Oct. 22.

CHOLERA.—This scourge of the West has again been among us; and its visit has been like that of a whirlwind.—For many weeks it had almost entirely disappeared, and we all felt secure; but on Saturday last several individuals were seized and died;—persons, the day before in perfect health, and with every advantage of assistance and medical aid.—From that time, for the next twenty-four hours, scarce an hour passed but we heard of some new case; from Saturday afternoon, till Monday morning it thus continued, carrying off in that time eighteen or twenty individuals,—it then stopped.

Cincinnati Gaz. of Oct. 18th.

Jabez W. Wilson, a lad about 14 years old, was charged on Thursday in Police Court with homicide, for killing a Mr. Horatio N. Pearce at South Boston on Wednesday afternoon, by discharging a musket, the contents of which entered the body of Mr. Pearce. The gun was loaded with shot of various sizes, which produced 136 wounds. Mr. Pearce lived about 12 hours afterwards. There was a post mortem examination by Drs. Hale, Hayward, Bradford, and Stebbins, whose opinion was, that the wounds (caused by the slug and shot found in him) produced his death. It did not appear that the prisoner and deceased were acquainted with each other, and the defence by W. Dorr Esq. was put upon the ground of misadventure and accident. Mr. Parker was present in behalf of the Commonwealth. The statute in cases of homicide gives no power to bail, and Mr. Justice Rogers felt himself bound to commit the boy to gaol until the sitting of the Supreme Court in November. Mr. Pearce was a mechanic residing in Sea-street, and has left a widow and four children.

Benjamin Ingall, of Taunton, Mass. and daughter of the late Col. Wm. Tew, of this town.—Her remains were brought to Taunton on Wednesday last, and committed to the silent tomb. It is a tribute justly due to this amiable lady to observe, that her affable disposition, accompanied with many other endearing qualities, rendered her the delight of her more immediate connections, the pleasure of the social circle with which she was daily conversant, and the joy of all who had an opportunity of witnessing her many virtues;—alas! how distressing, how keen the stroke—her tender offspring, thus suddenly deprived of the endearing attention and salutary instructions of a fond and indulgent mother, an affectionate husband, (now absent) shortly to renew the distressing scene, by listening with unparalleled grief to the sad relation of the mournful event of his irreparable loss;—but let not him, let not her surviving affectionate sisters, repine at this dispensation of Divine Providence, whose unerring wisdom can do no wrong; though dead, she yet speaketh, and from the dreary tomb points to the dial of revolving time, which emphatically exclaims, "This is not thy rest," prepare to meet thy God.

"Oh man, thy kingdom is departing from thee,
And while it lasts, is emptier than my shade!"

GIPSY.

hey forbids
d sall the maid—
Be like the summer flower,
d of light and shade;
ot have the veil thy brow,
bind thy streaming hair,—
alls the sun-beam through the trees, ight breathe the gentle air.

he arching forest twines its arms
Above thy houseless head,
And clasping vines, and bending grass
Beneath thy steps are spread.
And fruits that ask not stooping toil
Are all around thee piled—
So Nature spreads her downy wing
To shield her simple child.

Long ere the gilded palace shone,
Or sprang the marble dome,
The pillars of the forest rose,
And there was woman's home;
All that her untaught wishes asked,
The field and mountain gave,
She only claimed from mortal hands
A cradle and a grave.

Let luxury swathe her pallid child
In purple and in gold,
And wrap the breast that faintly beats
Beneath its silken fold;
Though she may wreath the languid forms
That round her altar bow,
Thou canst not see the hidden thorns
That rend her votary's brow.

Live as thou art—if soft and clear
The rippling surface glide,
Ask not to feel the deeper streams
That freeze beneath the tide;
If thought can breathe amidst the wild,—
If passion there can burn,
Read what the light of Heaven may teach,
And wish no more to learn.

Yes, they might train thine artless steps,
And deck thy brow with pearls,
And weave the spoils of farthest earth
Among thy raven curls;
But they will see waste away,
Nor heed thy fading bloom,
And heartless mirth, and sullen guilt,
Will trample on thy tomb.

Go slumber on the eagle's cliff
Or in the lion's lair—
Sin has not sought the desert cave,
Or stained the mountain air;
But turn thee from the tainted crowd,
The wilds are still the same,
Nor blight thy yet unsullied heart
With aught of earthly shame.

FROM THE NEW-YORK MIRROR.

POETRY.

BY MRS. SIGOURNEY.

Morn on her rosy couch awoke,
Enchantment led the hour,
And mirth and music drank the dews
That freshen'd beauty's flower;
When from her bower of deep light,
I heard a young girl sing—
"Oh, speak no ill of Poetry,
For 'tis a holy thing."

The sun, in noon-day heat rose high,
And on, with heaving breast,
I saw a weary pilgrim toil,
Unpitied and unblest;
Yet still, in trembling measures flow'd
Forth from a broken string—
"Oh, speak no ill of Poetry,
For 'tis a holy thing."

'Twas night, and death the curtains drew,
Mid agony severe,
While there a willing spirit went,
Home to a glorious sphere.
Yet still it sigh'd, e'en when was spread
The waiting angel's wing—
"Oh, speak no ill of Poetry,
For 'tis a holy thing."

AUTUMNAL EMBLEMS.

BY WM. HOWITT.

THE FADING OF THE WOODS.

Splendor is on the bough!
The withering leaves fall fast;
Yet wilder beauty crowns the forest now,
Than through the summer past.

A more resplendent blaze,
Of rich and radiant hues,
Gleams through the autumn haze,
Than 'mid the summer dews.

So is it nature loves
In all her power to part;
So with her passing splendor moves
The severing human heart.

Calmly through pleasant years
We love some kindred mind;
But 'tis only through our parting tears
Its full delights we find.

Then, how in form and face,
In every act and tone,
Beam forth the tenderness and grace
That melt us, and are flown!

TO A FAIR COUSIN.

I saw thee first a tiny thing,
Around my neck thy arms would cling!
I nursed thee, then, upon my knee,
In helpless, beauteous infancy;
Whither thy first footsteps would stray,
Thither I shared thy infant play.
Gath'ring the fair spring-daisy flower
Which then amused thy thoughtless hour.

Around the dear domestic hearth
Again I shared thy childish mirth,
And heard thy early lisping tongue
Repeat the verse, or tune the song:
Thy bounding step and artless glee
Had then a world of charms for me,—
Fain would I stay the course of time
To gaze upon thy girlhood's prime!

A woman! now I look upon
A creature to be loved and won;
Doomed, in the busy world, to share
Its joys, affections, pain and care.
To be the light of home, to bless
With smiles and words of tenderness.
May he who claims thee for his own
Protect and love the woman grown!

MISCELLANY.

GERMAN LEGENDS.

We copy the following, from the European correspondence of the Albany Evening Journal, which is known to proceed from the pen of the Hon. William A. Seward, the Whig candidate for Governor of New-York. The following legend, illustrative of the German love of the marvellous, is contained in his last published letter:—

LEGEND OF THE DRACHENFELS.

"In old times, says the tradition, the cavern which is seen on the summit of this mountain, was the retreat of a monstrous dragon to whom the neighboring inhabitants rendered divine honors and paid human sacrifices. For victims they selected prisoners of war.

One day they found among the captives a young lady of one of the best families of the country and who had been educated in the christian religion. So great was her beauty that the two rival chiefs of the victorious army disputed their claims to her as the reward of their valor. The senators of the council decided that she should be offered to the dragon, to the end that her beauty might no longer produce dissension among the chiefs. The intended victim was clothed in white, crowned with flowers and conducted to the side of the mountain and bound to a tree, before which a stone served for an altar. A great multitude assembled to witness the terrible spectacle of the damsel devoured by the dragon. But among them all there were very few so insensible as not to compassionate the hard fate of the maiden, who remained calm and collected, with her eyes steadfastly fixed on high. At the dawn of day the animal left the cavern and extended his claws towards the altar where he was accustomed to find his horrible sacrifice. The young christain was unmoved, she drew from her bosom the image of her Savior upon the cross and presented it at the first approach of the beast. The animal fled affrighted and uttering dreadful cries threw himself into the most profound retreat of the woods whence he never returned.

The people astonished by the meraculous deliverance, pressed around the young Christian, broke her bonds and regarded with admiration the crusifix. The captive instructed them in her firm reliance upon the cross and the power of the God whom she adored. They prostrated themselves at her feet and prayed her to return to her own people, and send them a priest who could instruct and baptize them in her miraculous faith. Thus, (adds the tradition) the Drapchenfels (or cave of the dragon) became the first receptacle of the true faith in these Cantons, and a chapel was erected in the place where had stood the stone which served as an alter to the Demon."

This tradition, if genuine, is one among a thousand evidences that the early preachers of christianity availed themselves of the superstitious credulity of the Pagans; and relied upon other miracles besides those well authenticated in the holy gospels."

THE OFFSPRING OF MERCY.

BY J. G. VON HERDER.

As the Almighty was about to create Man, he called the angels of his attributes, the watchers of his dominions before him. They stood in council around his invisible throne.

'Create him not,' said the angel of Justice, 'he will be unjust to his brethren and the oppressor of the feeble.'

'Create him not,' said the angel of Peace, 'he will stain the earth with human blood; the first-born of his race will slay his brother.'

'Create him not,' said the angel of Truth, 'he will defile thy sanctuary with falsehood, although thou shouldst impress on his countenance thine own image, the seal of confidence.'

Thus spake the angels of the attributes of Jehovah; when Mercy, the youngest and darling child of the Eternal, arose, and embracing his knees, "Create him, father,' said she, in thine own likeness, the darling of thy loving kindness. When all thy angels forsake him, I will seek and turn his faults to good. Because he is weak, I will incline his bowels to compassion, and his soul to atonement. When he strays from peace, from truth, from justice, the consequences of his wanderings shall prevent him from repeating them, and shall gently lead him to amendment.'

The Father of All listened to her request, and created Man, a weak faltering being, but in his waywardness the pupil of mercy, the child of ever active and ameliorating love.

Remember thine origin. O man! when thou art hard and unkind to thy brother. 'Mercy alone desired thy existence. Pity and Love nursed thee on their bosoms.

Newport, Sept. 27.

THE BLUE BOOK.—The Subscribers have just published an edition of the Blue Book. This volume contains much information highly interesting to the people of this country, and which can be obtained from no other source, and as the number of copies printed under the resolutions of Congress is limited to five hundred, few ever see the work, except members of Congress, and the officers of the government at Washington.

The Blue Book is compiled by the Secretary of State, every two years, under resolutions of Congress. It contains lists of all the officers and agents, civil, military and naval, in the service of the United States, with the amount of their pay, &c. of all printers of the laws of the United States, and of those employed in any way by Congress, or by any officer or department of the government, with their compensation; together with a statement of all allowances made by the Postmaster General to each contractor on his contract for transporting the mail, distinguishing the sum stipulated to be paid by the contract, and the sum paid by way of allowance.

It is thought that the information to be drawn from this volume will make its general circulation at this time gratifying to the public; and with that belief it is offered to their patronage.

The above work is comprised in upwards of 440 pages duodecimo, printed on fine paper, and delivered to subscribers at $1,50 per copy, bound in blue leather.
KEY & BIDDLE, Philadelphia.

☞ Orders for the above work, are received by H. BARBER, No. 153, Thames-street.

Terms—under $100 cash; $100, sixty days credit; 200 ninety days; 300, four months. No discount allowed except interest.

The Glass manufactured by the New-England Crown Glass Company, is composed of the best materials, rendering its transparency very pure, and its color very bright, and making it valuable for Factories, Stores, Dwelling and Meeting Houses, as it casts no coloured tinge when the rays of light pass through it.

All orders will receive immediate attention and prompt execution.

Its workmanship is good, and it is very straight and even. Being all of the first thickness, it is cheaper, besides being stronger than other Crown Glass, when the thickness and weight of the metal are considered, as will be found on comparison with Foreign Crown Glass.
